The Original Storyteller

KENNETH GRAHAME was born in Edinburgh, Scotland in 1859, but after his mother died when he was 5, Kenneth went to live with his grandmother in the English village of Cookham Dene. His childhood years were spent playing with his brothers and sister on the banks of the River Thames. Although he grew up to be a banker working in Victorian London, he spent most of his free time walking along the Thames and dreaming of becoming a writer. In 1895, The Golden Age, a collection of short stories about the adventures of five children, was published, followed by its sequel, Dream Days, which contains the now-familiar tale of "The Reluctant Dragon."

Although both early works were popular, it was The Wind in the Willows that established Kenneth Grahame as one of the world's great authors of children's literature. The masterpiece began innocently enough as a series of stories Grahame made up to soothe his rambunctious young son, Alastair, at bedtime. The stories, which featured familiar animals of the English countryside, continued in letters when father and son were apart, letters that were thankfully saved by their housekeeper. Although Grahame apparently didn't relish "the sheer physical torture" of writing, he added new chapters to the letters and published the manuscript in 1908. The book met with an initially mild reception but found an unlikely champion in President Theodore Roosevelt, who sang the praises of The Wind in the Willows and soon Grahame's fanciful novel was a solid hit on both sides of the Atlantic.

The New Storytellers

RICHARD HELLESEN

I wish I could write music, but I write plays instead. Which I never planned to do; it just turned out that way. I grew up in the City of Orange, where I always liked doing plays in school; I wrote my first short play in third grade, and another in fifth grade. (That year my teacher read a wonderful book called The Wind in the Willows to us.) I really got involved in theatre in high school. Thanks to a particularly generous (and patient) drama teacher, I wrote and performed more short plays and my first long one.

We also took field trips to a theatre called South Coast Repertory, which was a lot of fun although I could never imagine actually working there.... When I went to college at Cal State Fullerton I studied Serious Things, but in my spare time found myself – guess what – acting and writing. Finally I realized I had to make a choice, and since Serious Things would always be there, I thought I'd give theatre a try. I'm still trying many years later. I've written several long and short plays for adults produced at theatres across the country, including SCR, and won a few awards and worked with many wonderful people. In 1990, Michael Silversher and I began writing musicals that would tour to schools; our most recent ones, which you might have seen, include Bad Water Blues, Power Play, Indian Summer, and this year's The Pride of Weedpatch Camp. The Wind in the Willows has been our biggest challenge, but I've been lucky to have the help of a great story, brilliant director, a marvelous cast, and a composer who gives my work another, richer voice. As ever, I've also taken inspiration from my own family, especially my son and daughter.

They're always in my mind when I write my family plays – and in reading to them, and seeing the books they've discovered for themselves, they've taught me that children's literature is really for everybody. And that helping children grow may be the most Serious Thing of all...That may sound a bit like Badger, but more often I feel like I lead Rat's life: messing about in a boat called "theatre." It's actually much like the boat called "life": if you take a friend, and a luncheon basket, and row hard sometimes, and sometimes let the river take you where it wants to, you'll have a wonderful adventure. And you might get a poem out of it, too. This is one of mine. I hope you enjoy it!

MICHAEL SILVER$HER

I write songs, mostly. I also write music by itself, without words on occasion, but mostly I write songs with words. I've been writing songs from the time I was 8 years old. I just always heard music in my head. I'd ask everyone I knew if they'd heard this piece of music before, and when they said "No," I figured I had written it. And I had!

I've written a lot of songs with my partner Patty Silversher for Disney — mostly for television and video movies, like Little Mermaid 2 and Return of Jafar, "Winnie-the-Pooh" specials and TV theme songs ("Gummi Bears" and "Tale Spin," currently on the Toon Disney). Also for Jim Henson and the Muppets — the TV series "Animal Jam" on the Learning Channel, "Muppet Classic Theatre," and "Elmo in Grouchland." That won a Grammy Award for Best Children's Album with Music in 1999. We've also been nominated for three Emmy Awards for Best Individual Achievement in Songwriting for Television.

I won a scholarship to Berklee School of Music in Boston way back in 1969 and attended a summer there. I've been writing theatre music for 33 years, and I still love doing it.

I hope you enjoy the music you hear in The Wind in the Willows as much as I have enjoyed writing it. It's one of my favorite stories. My mother used to read it to me before I even knew how to read, and I've always wanted to see it come to life, out of the book and onto a stage with music that I would write myself. And

The Rest of the Creative Team

Director ART MANKKE knew what he wanted to do when he grew up from the time he was 8. Originally from Chicago, he began performing in plays and musicals at age 13, and directed and produced Edward Albee's American Dream in high school. He studied theatre at the University of Illinois and gained a Master of Fine Arts degree in acting from the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco. Since that time he has worked in various capacities as an actor on stage and in television, as a producer, director and choreographer, and in 1991 co-founded a classical theatre company in Los Angeles called A Noise Within for which he was Artistic Director for ten years. He has worked on several plays at South Coast Repertory, most recently serving as period movement consultant for the 17th Century world of Cyrano de Bergerac.

Set Designer DONNA MARQUET has designed all three Theatre for Young Audiences productions this inaugural season. She loves to design, draw, paint and especially likes to work on shows that are as much fun as The Wind in the Willows. Her background includes college in Ohio and a Master's degree in California and she feels "education is the most important gift you can give yourself."

Romanian-born Costume Designer ANGELA BALOGH GALIN has designed SCR's recent productions of Mr. Marmalade and Sideways Stories from Wayside School, and the recent Educational Touring Show Production The Pride of Weepatch Camp.

CHRIS RUNNE has come up to SCR from San Diego to do the lighting design for Wind in the Willows. Chris grew up acting on the stages of Junior Theatre and San Diego Opera. Towards the end of his college studies, he became interested again in doing theatre, this time

scenes. Chris has designed sets and lights for several youth productions in San Diego, including ones produced by The Old Globe, San Diego Junior Theatre, La Jolla Jewish Community Center. Some of his favorite shows to design have been Alice in Wonderland, James and the Giant Peach, Cyrano de Bergerac and Pippi Longstocking.

Dramaturg JERRY PATCH has written many plays that traveled to Orange County elementary schools as part of SCR's Educational Touring Production, and assisted in the creation of nearly 150 plays by other writers. Among the writers he's enjoyed working with are Richard Greenberg, Donald Margulies and Margaret Edson. In 2000, he co-conceived The Education of Randy Newman with Michael Roth and singer/songwriter Randy Newman.

Dialect Consultant PAMELA VANDERWAY's job is to help each actor sound like he or she is really someone else. As part of her job she interviews people from different countries and cultures, making recordings of these interviews. She uses these recordings to help actors accurately learn how their characters might speak. (Today you'll hear that the characters are from several areas of England.) Some of her clients have won Oscars, Tonys and Emmys. Because of her unusual job, Pamela has been interviewed by the Los Angeles Times, and "CNN Headline News."

Stage Manager RICHARD SOTO* has been on "General Hospital" and "The West Wing" and loves comic books and cartoons. He has acted and stage managed 13 SCR Educational Touring Productions, digs Elvis, and loves his daughter Shanna.

Originally from Richmond, Virginia, ERIN NELSON*, Assistant Stage Manager, is thrilled to be in California and working with SCR again after working on The Emperor's New Clothes and Sideways Stories from Wayside School.

Darin Anthony (Ensemble) is glad to be working at SCR again having just finished the Educational Touring Production tour last month. You may have seen The Pride of Weedpatch Camp at your school. Darin played six roles in the show but it was Will Hansen, the 12-year-old singing cowboy, who was his favorite. Darin grew up in Orange County, attended Los Alamitos High School and then went to Chicago to train as an actor. It was his time in Chicago that changed his life. The people, the cultural diversity and just the weather had a profound effect on him. Darin has been an actor since he was in eighth grade and has worked at many theatres in Los Angeles, ranging from slapstick to Shakespeare. He's proud to be a part of SCR's new program Theatre for Young Audiences.

Jenna Cole (Ensemble) began her performing career in Minneapolis at the age of 5 as a tap dancing chipmunk. She became inspired by a production of King Lear at the Guthrie Theater, and after attending college and then the American Conservatory Theatre in San Francisco, she moved to Los Angeles. She is a resident artist and instructor at A Noise Within in Glendale.

Nathanael Johnson (Mole) remembers that "to help us learn our multiplication tables, my third Grade teacher, Mrs. Hall, would play songs about them on the record player. Using my ruler as a microphone, I got up and started to lip-sync to them. My friends in class joined me, and inevitably 'The Multiplication Times Table Band' was formed; we were a sensational hit! Seeing how earnest I was to perform, Mrs. Hall suggested that I should be an actor when I grew up. Since that day, acting has been my passion. I moved to L.A. after graduating from the Yale School of Drama and am pleased to be back after playing

Emperor Marcus in The

Emperor's New Clothes."

Phil Johnson (Ensemble) thinks he is a comedian. Sometimes he stands up in front of people and they laugh at him, which could be traumatic, but he seems to like it. Other times he was on Broadway with the musical Les Misérables and traveled around with Sunset Boulevard and Miss Saigon. This year he went on as The Grinch in How The Grinch Stole Christmas at The Old Globe in San Diego. He sings, so he has an album. (You have to, y'know?) He does a lot of shows where he plays all the parts and is the only one onstage. This is because sometimes no one else wants to play with him. Feel sorry for him.

John-David Keller (Badger) has directed more plays for children and more children in plays than anyone at SCR. He was the director of The Emperor's New Clothes and A Christmas Carol earlier this season (and all 23 Carols before). And, as the director for all of the Educational Touring Productions, he sends plays to local schools including this year's The Pride of Weedpatch Camp.

Danny Sheie's (Rat) first professional stage role was as a pig in Fargo, North Dakota. Prior to that he had played a tree and a gypsy in school and had an apple shot off his head as the son of William Tell at summer camp. He has been in plays in Los Angeles, Pasadena, San Francisco, Berkeley, Santa Cruz, Chicago, Providence, Rhode Island, New Haven, Connecticut, Indiana, North Carolina and Canterbury, England. His grandpa was a high school principal, his mom taught second grade and he is a professor at the University of California.

Tom Shelton (Toad) appeared in SCR's stagings of Galileo, The Merchant of Venice, Hotel Paradiso and as Topper in SCR's first staging of A Christmas Carol. He was in the Educational Touring Productions of SCR's The Communication Show and The Right Self and participated in its 1980 Summer Conservatory.

Tom's most recent work with The Laguna Playhouse was The Constant Wife and before that Who's Hot Who's Not, Communicating Doors, The Woman in Black, Company, Don't Dress for Dinner, Travels with My Aunt and Inspecting Carol among others. Two seasons ago he appeared in the Playhouse's 23-city national tour of Copenhagen. As a 15-season veteran of L.A.'s Hillside Repertory, he appeared in Travesties, Harvey, Hay Fever, HMS Pinafore and Shadowlands among many others. Tom is also a voice-over artist, pianist, teacher, award-winning composer-lyricist and co-author of several long-running murder thrillers for The Gourmet Detective.

Amy Tolsky (Ensemble) started acting in high school and never stopped! Her career has taken her around the world. She toured Europe as Jeanie in Hair. For years she lived in England where she loved going to see her favorite actors onstage as well as pursuing her own career in theatre, TV, film and radio. Since moving back to "the States," she has enjoyed many diverse roles including Olivia/Maria in Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, a wacky nurse on "Scrubs" and characters on "Strong Medicine" and Nickelodeon's "The Amanda Show." Amy finds that acting is a great way to learn about the many different people who inhabit our wonderful world.

The Animals

MOLE: European moles have black, velvety fur and a rounded body. Their stumpy front legs are spade-like with sharp claws, and their back legs are small and weak. They have a pink pointed snout, small eyes, and a short furry tail. Moles live throughout England wherever soil is deep enough for tunneling, which they can dig at the rate of 60 feet per day! Moles feed mostly on earthworms, but they also eat insect larvae, slugs, and snails.

BADGER: Badgers are the largest members of the weasel family in England. They live in groups of up to 12, digging tunnels and chambers in small woodland clearings. Badgers are largely nocturnal animals that communicate by smell. Their hearing is sharp but they don't have very good eyesight. Badgers are easy to recognize by the black and white stripes running from nose to shoulder. Their wedge-shaped bodies and short, strong legs are perfectly adapted to digging. Badgers eat frogs, rodents, birds, eggs, lizards, insects, seeds, berries and bulbs, but earthworms are their favorite food.

WATER VOLE: Water voles are often mistaken for rats. (In fact, Ratty is actually a water vole.) Water voles have dark fur, a round body, a short, fat face and a long, fur-covered tail. They are widespread throughout England, where they inhabit the banks of ditches, dykes, slow-moving rivers, streams and grasslands. They are expert swimmers but not specialized for a life in the water, preferring instead to live in burrows into riverbanks and make a nest which they line with grass. Water voles feed mostly on grasses and plants.

T*OAD: Toads have rough, dry skin and short legs on which they can only crawl along, unlike frogs that leap using their long back legs. The bumps, or warts, on a toad's skin are used in self-defense, for if a toad is threatened, these glands produce a sticky white liquid strong enough to make even a dog feel sick. Toads are amphibians, which means they spend most of their time in damp habitats. The European toad is nocturnal, hiding under stones and logs during the day and emerging at dusk to feed on insects, worms, and slugs.

W*EASEL: The weasel is the smallest meat-eating animal in England. They are reddish-brown in color with a cream underbelly, long thin bodies and short tails. These tiny mammals live in a variety of habitats including towns, farmland, woodland, moors and marshes. Weasels are fearless and will put up quite a fight when attacked, but as they are so small, they often get eaten by hawks and owls. They eat small rodents like mice and voles, often making dens in the nests of their victims.

S*TOATS: Stoats are similar to weasels, but they are bigger with a black tip on the end of their tails and a brown coat that turns white in winter. During this time, they're called ermines. Stoats are found all across Northern Europe and Great Britain, where they live in hollow trees or rock crevices in marshes near the woods, along shorelines and in the mountains. They have a good sense of sight, smell, and hearing, and can live as long as 10 years.

Stoats are carnivorous, preferring voles, mice, and rabbits.

Have you ever seen any of them?
