Un Phénomène Français

After the third quarter of the 16th Century “only the French” – as a contemporary put it – “recklessly engaged in duels,” or at least engaged in them with an ardour which had no equivalent elsewhere. The accounts given by foreigners are the best proof of this. We must therefore take as a pertinent observation trologers. It had been announced, and therefore imposed, by the most ancient and venerable prophecies, ranging from a vision which King Chilperic had at the dawn of French history to one of David’s psalms or Nebuchadnezzar’s dream in Holy Writ itself. So the French were duellists because of a mysterious and divine decision.

Obviously such explanations do not explain the phenomenon for us, but they have an interest which goes beyond anecdotal curiosity. These explanations, formulated and disseminated at the time, helped to consolidate phenomenon and reinforce its durability. For if it were destiny, be it biological, astrological or providential, which forced the French, commoners included, to fight duels, then it was pointless to try to resist. The acceptance that it is the nature or fate of a nation to adopt a certain social attitude, it is a guarantee that individuals are not responsible for the unfortunate consequences of their actions. The stereotype of the furia francese, of the hot-blooded people, justified and reinforced the duel’s strength in France.

and not as boasting the affirmation by French authors that their compatriots surpassed their Italian masters and that the duel, which was brought back from Naples by Charles VIII’s army, found its most favourable territory in France—as already witnessed by the character of the ancient Gauls. For it was not enough to state that dueling was a chiefly French phenomenon. This fact was justified and interpreted with all sorts of arguments which we can classify as natural and supernatural.

According to supernatural arguments, the French aptitude, and indeed vocation, for single combat was beyond all rational explanation, except perhaps for that of as-

Antoine Jacob de Montfleury

by John Strand

Antoine Jacob (1640-1685), known as Montfleury, wrote plays for a brief, twelve-year period during the golden age of French comedy. Louis XIV reigned absolutely on the throne, and Molière, less absolutely but no less brilliantly, on the stage. As a writer of comedies, Molière had several serious rivals in his day. Of these, Montfleury was, for a time, the most serious.

He was the principal playwright for the Hôtel de Bourgogne, the prestigious troupe that predated Molière's, and which was also funded directly by the king. He wrote some 15 plays, all comedies, with the exception of one well-received tragedy (which incidentally, bears a good deal of resemblance in plot to Hamlet, Montfleury having used the same source material as Shakespeare). Of his comedies, several were superior, enjoyed great success in their day, and were played regularly on French stages well after the playwright's death. Among these were Le Mari sans femme (The Husband Without a Wife), La Fille capitaine (The Girl Soldier), and his masterpiece, La Femme juge et partie (The Wife, Judge and Accuser).

Montfleury came from a prestigious theatre family. His father, Zacharie Jacob, also known as Montfleury, was a sometime-playwright and renowned actor, one of the great stage performers in a culture that took its theatre very seriously, debated it hotly, and supported it assiduously. Montfleury père was a big presence, literally. He was a mammoth figure, rotund with a powerful, booming voice and given to Zacharie Jacob de Montfleury (1600-1667), father of the playwright.

Cyrano de Bergerac (pictured at left) wrote a letter in which he made fun, rather heavily, of Montfleury's large stomach: "I can assure you," he wrote, "that if a beating could be sent by post, you would read my letter with your shoulders; and don't be surprised by my suggestion as, your rounded surface being so great, I am convinced you are a land in which I would like to plant sticks to see what would become of them." In Act One of his play Cyrano de Bergerac (to be produced at SCR this June), Edmond Rostand turned this epistolary incident into a face-to-face meeting between Cyrano and Montfleury on the stage of the Hôtel de Bourgogne.

(from Daily Life in the French Theatre at the Time of Molière by Georges Mongrédien, translated by Claire Eliane Engel) exaggerated stance and delivery, a style then much appreciated, although not universally: Zacharie Montfleury's chief detractor was Molière. When the latter lampooned Montfleury in The Impromptu of Versailles, the rivalry turned to bitter enmity. To the defense of his father leapt the son, then aged 24 and a lawyer who had written a half dozen plays. Antoine penned The Impromptu of the Hôtel de Condé, a deliberate counter-attack that lampooned Molière in the same fashion. The family honor, at least, was intact.

Shortly thereafter, Zacharie Montfleury made the mistake that earned him the disdain of generations of French literary historians and theatre critics:

he denounced Molière to the King, accusing the great playwright of having married his own daughter, a rumor that plagued Molière throughout his later years. The King did nothing directly about was forced to wear to support his enormous belly.

Antoine's breakthrough as a playwright came just after his father's death.

The Royal Players of the Hôtel de Bourgogne.

Hôtel de Bourgogne

Built in 1548, the Hôtel de Bourgogne was the first theatre in Paris and for a long time, the city's only true theatre. The building was leased to traveling players until 1610, when the first permanent company was formed. Called the King's Players, the actors at the Bourgogne were the unchallenged masters of theatrical art, with legendary performers such as Bellerose, Floridor and Montfleury setting the bombastic style of the day. The arrival of Molière at the Théâtre Marais in 1658 created fierce competition between the two companies and the Hôtel de Bourgogne was never able to regain its former supremacy. In 1680, these two companies merged to form the Comédie Française.

the charges, Montfleury père died a short time later, having been mortally injured, the story goes, by a portion of his stage costume—the metal belt he

La Femme juge et partie was a resounding success and something of a scandal, due to its controversial subject matter. Playing on stage a few blocks away was another scandal: Molière's Tartuffe. It is said that Montfleury's play was considered by his contemporaries to be the equal of Molière's. History has disagreed.

Montfleury fils admired above all else the Spanish model—the great dramatists Lope de Vega and Calderón. He could speak Spanish fluently, better, according to the Queen of Spain (whom he knew) than many Spaniards of her court. Many of his own plots were borrowed, in the common practice of the day, from Spanish plays. At a time when Molière was inventing a French comedy of manners, using the Italian model as a jumping-off point, Montfleury remained devoted to the romantic, florid, and often bawdy material of Spanish theatre. As a result—in a curious, geography-defying twist of literary fate—Montfleury's work is closer in style to Elizabethan theatre than to the new French style Molière was establishing.

Horns of Dilemma

The Oxford English Dictionary defines “cuckold” as a “derivative name for the husband of an unfaithful wife.” The word can also be used as a verb meaning “to dishonor a husband by committing adultery.” Derived from the Middle English word cukeweld or cokewold, which in turn appears to have come from the Old French cucuault, this derogatory term has been around for more than seven centuries.

The modern French word for cuckold, cocu, is also the name of the European cuckoo. Females of this species make no nests of their own, but instead lay their eggs in other birds’ nests—unusual behavior that apparently recalls the scandalous deeds of unfaithful wives. The cuckoo was sacred to the medieval May-games, when marriage bonds were temporarily ignored and promiscuity was the order of the day.

The origin of the image of horns, which is typically associated with cuckoldry, is unclear. It may have descended from the pagan sign of the Horned God, which was sacrificed as a stag, goat, or ram at the spring feasts. Priests wore the horns of the sacrificed animals on their heads, and horned masks or headdresses were commonly worn by participants in the rite. When a married woman had sexual relations outside of marriage, her husband was said to sprout horns, in reference to his public humiliation. Throughout history, the horn has been a powerful emblem of sexual power (or the lack thereof). To give a man “the horn” was to signify the sexual conquest of his wife, thereby exposing the husband’s impotence and the adulterer’s virility.

On this page are two depictions of cuckolds illustrating this concept. In the one at left, the betrayed husband has actually sprouted horns; in the one above, the seducer of the woman on the couch is drawing a cuckold’s horns

Jeffries' puppets have appeared in several Cornerstone productions, including Body of Faith and Mary Shelley's Santa Claus, and have been featured in shows at Company One, The Road Company, Kanaheel, The Guthrie Lab, and the Mark Taper Forum's Other Voices Project. She has received a Drama-Logue Award and two Back Stage West Garland Awards, and nominations for two Ovation Awards and a Lester Horton Dance Award for Set Design.

SHIGERU YAJI (Costume Design) is very pleased to enter his 22nd season at SCR with more than 45 productions including most recently Major Barbara and The School for Wives. Over more than 20 years, he has designed for 25 theatres on the West Coast, creating costumes for more than 120 productions. He is the recipient of numerous awards and recognitions, including six Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle Awards and a Bay Area Theatre Critics Circle Award. His most recent entertainment designs have been for a spectacle show, Mystic Rhythms, at Tokyo Disney Sea in Japan, and the A&E broadcast of Cathy Rigby's Peter Pan, for which he received a 2000-01 Emmy Award nomination following the production's Broadway engagement and national tour. Mr. Yaji is a member of the United Scenic Artists Local 829 and the UC Irvine Drama Department faculty.

GEOFF KORF (Lighting Design) designed lighting for the SCR productions of Two Gentlemen of Verona, The Dazzle, Making It, Hold Please, Art, Entertaining Mr. Sloane, Amy's View, The Summer Moon, References to Salvador Dali, Make Me Hot and Two Sisters and a Piano. Most recently he designed the lights for Sandra Tsing Loh's Sugar Plum Fairy at the Geffen Playhouse. Mr. Korf is also a member of the ensemble of Cornerstone Theater where he has designed more than 20 productions in the past 11 years. His designs have also appeared in productions at the Mark Taper Forum, La Jolla Playhouse, Old Globe Theatre, Seattle Repertory Theatre, ACT Theatre in Seattle, Long Beach Opera, San Francisco Opera, Goodman Theatre, Trinity Repertory, Yale Repertory Theatre, Huntington Theatre, Actors Theatre of Louisville, The Children's Theatre Company of Minneapolis, Stage One in Louisville, and on Broadway. Mr. Korf is a graduate of California State University, Chico and the Yale School of Drama. He is also a member of the faculty at the University of Washington in Seattle.

PAUL JAMES PRENDERGAST (Composer/Sound Design) is honored to be making his SCR debut, and overjoyed to be working once again with old friends. Theatre credits include productions at the Mark Taper (Forum, Ivy, P.L.A.Y.), Long Wharf Theatre, Great Lakes Theater Festival, Florida Stage, the Geffen, East West Players, dozens of 99 seaters and 20 productions with Cornerstone Theater Company. His work has been featured at theme parks, in feature films, on recordings and in music venues nationwide. He also works as a vocalist, actor, scenic designer, and is knee deep in the world of alternative (natural) house building. He lives in Los Angeles and Joshua Tree.

DANIEL R. FORCEY (Fight Choreographer) received his undergraduate degree in theatre with minors in physics and philosophy from the University of Southern California. Mr. Forcey also holds his graduate degree in Acting with an emphasis on movement teaching from York University in Toronto, Canada, where he wrote his master's thesis on the use of the British quarterstaff. He has worked extensively across the US and Canada for the last ten years, choreographing and teaching movement and stage combat. He has held faculty positions at York University, the Centre for Indigenous Theatre, the University of Southern California, Cal State University, Long Beach, Cal Poly Pomona and the Cerritos Center for the Performing Arts. His work can currently be seen in Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World (20th Century Fox) and on the History Channel program "Conquest."

LAURIE WOOLERY (Assistant Director) is an actor, director and playwright who has worked at SCR, the Mark Taper Forum, Los Angeles Theatre Center, Cornerstone Theatre, Deaf-West Theatre, fofo Theatre, Highways Performance Space, A Noise Within, Sundance Playwrights Lab as well as the Sundance Children's Theatre. As a director and playwright, she has created and collaborated on many new works including Orphan Train: The Lost Children, The Snow Teen, BLISS, I Slept with Jack Kerouac, Lapin and Lapinova, California Scenarios and the adaptation of Eleanor Estes' The Hundred Dresses. Her award-winning production of Our Town won Best Scene at the 2001 Kennedy Center's American College Theatre Festival and her production of A Sick World was part of in the O'Neill Summer Festival. Her solo play, Salvadorian Moon/African Sky, was commissioned by the Cornerstone Theatre Company and performed by Ms. Woolery in their citywide Festival of Faith. She worked on the world premiere of Lisa Loomer's Living Out and Annie Weisman's A Totally Meaningful Ritual at the Mark Taper Forum. Ms. Woolery is an Associate Artist with Cornerstone Theatre Company, an active member of the Virginia Avenue Project, playwright in residence for Hollywood Children's Home in Los Angeles, Instructor at Citrus College and Director of SCR's Young Conservatory. He has served as a consultant to the Orange County Performing Arts Center and as a theatre panelist and onsite evaluator for the National Endowment for the Arts. He has served on the Executive Committee of the League of Resident Theatres, and as a panelist for the California Arts Council. After attending Orange Coast College, he received his BA and MA from California State University, San Francisco, and his PhD in theatre and film from USC.

MARTIN BENSON (Artistic Director) shares co-founder credit and artistic leadership of SCR with his colleague David Emmes. As one of SCR's chief directors, Mr. Benson has directed nearly one third of the plays produced here in the last 39 years. He has distinguished himself in the staging of contemporary work, including Horton Foote's The Carpetbagger's Children and the world premiere of his Getting Frankie Married—and Afterwards, the critically acclaimed California premiere of William Nicholson's Shadowlands, Athol Fugard's Playland, Brian Friel's Dancing at Lughnasa, David Mamet's Oleanna, Harold Pinter's The Homecoming, David Hare's Skylight and the West Coast premieres of Peter Hedges' Good As New and Martin McDonagh's The Lonesome West. He has won accolades for his direction of five major works by George Bernard Shaw, including the Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle (LADCC) Award winners Major Barbara, Misalliance and Heartbreak House. Among the numerous world premieres he has directed are Tom Strellich's BAFO and Margaret Edson's Pulitzer Prize-winning Wit, which he also directed at Seattle Repertory Theatre and the Alley Theatre in Houston. He has directed American classics including Ab, Wilderness!, A Streetcar Named Desire, A Delicate Balance and All My Sons. Mr. Benson has been honored with the Drama-Logue Award for his direction of 21 productions and received LADCC Distinguished Achievement in Directing awards an unparalleled seven times for the three Shaw productions, John Millington Synge's Playboy of the Western World, Arthur Miller's The Crucible, Sally Nemeth's Holy Days and Wit. He also directed the film version of Holy Days using the original SCR cast. Along with David Emmes, he accepted SCR's 1988 Tony Award for Outstanding Resident Professional Theatre and won the 1995 Theatre LA Ovation Award for Lifetime Achievement. Mr. Benson received his BA in Theatre from California State University, San Francisco.

PAULA TOMEI (Managing Director) is responsible for the overall administration of South Coast Repertory and has been Managing Director since 1994. A member of the SCR staff since 1979, she has served in a number of administrative capacities including Subscriptions Manager, Business Manager and General Manager.
